What is this about?

A grassroots process in which teams of often young people have documented the efforts of their own communities around the world to effect social change.

From Bahá'í Writings:

A process of building vibrant communities is unfolding through individual and collective action in the words of Bahá'u'lláh:

"translate that which hath been written into reality and action."

From Bahá'í Writings:

"The right path is a path which leads man to the day spring of perception and dawning-place of knowledge and directs him to that which is the cause of honor and glory and greatness."

Admission is free and open to all
